

MICH. WOMAN SEES COMPANIONS SLIP TO DEATH

FINAL WEEK OF ASSEMBLY TO BE FULL OF ACTION

Legislature Must Work Long Hours To Complete Its Work

Springfield, Ill., June 24—(AP)—By working until Friday, the last day, the 58th General Assembly should be able to complete all its work, barring unexpected filibusters or major disagreements.

The official deadline is Friday at midnight, since new laws must be enacted in time to become effective on July 1, Saturday.

Virtually all appropriation bills have been passed, only a few remaining on the calendars.

The status of the nine issues which were made Governor Horner's June legislative program is as follows:

On third reading in the House, after passing the Senate, are the sales tax, tax commission and the minimum wage bills.

Occupying a similar position in the Senate are the utility regulation, insurance, Chicago school board and housing proposals.

Many Bills Doomed

Reapportionment has been defeated, but the Chicago sanitary district bond bill is on its way to the Governor's desk.

Many bills are expected to die on the calendars without reaching a final vote, but generally speaking both houses, by working long hours during recent weeks, have been able to avoid an unusually severe last-minute jam.

The House will return from its week-end adjournment on Monday and the Senate on Tuesday.

The climatic battle over the sale tax overshadowed all else at the end of the 58th Assembly and Horner's first six months' as Governor.

If Horner wins his twice-fought campaign for a tax on sales, it will be in the face of concerted downstate opposition that has split the Democratic leadership over the administration's plan for taping a new source of revenue.

Fate Uncertain

The fate of the sales tax will be determined early next week, but what it will be is beyond prediction.

The Governor's floor leaders have steered his all-important bill through the Senate and to third reading in the House, avoiding opposition amendments. Despite narrow escapes on several roll calls the sales tax has received the 77 votes which will be required to pass it when the House reconvenes Monday morning to resume the battle.

The final vote will show some defections in Cook county, which have unanimous bi-partisan support to the original three per cent sales tax law, held unconstitutional.

Border Counties Fight

Downstate opposition is entrenched in border counties, where retailers fear that a tax on sales would drive trade across the state line. Outside the Chicago area, the Republican minority stands almost solidly against the sales tax. Several Democratic leaders have led desertions from the Democratic ranks.

While legislators confer the last time with their constituents, the problem before administration followers is to recruit some two dozen downstate votes. There will be twitted votes, both for and against the bill, from the House roll calls take this week.

Horne Backs Lantz

There will be tax bills for poor relief, regardless, Horner has thrown his support behind the proposals of Senator Simon E. Lantz, Congerville Republican, to permit Cook county to levy a property tax to take care of its jobless.

These bills, also on third reading in the House, would permit sine die adjournment with the knowledge that something had been done for Chicago's relief problem.

Furthermore, they would assure downstaters that, if the sales tax is enacted, the end of the first six months of the biennium beginning a week from today would permit the revenues to be turned to the abatement of the state property tax. This would remove one of the special session probabilities and help relieve the revenue burden on real estate.

Aimee's Husband Brands Message Proclaiming Him Father Of Nine-Pound Son In Paris 'Ridiculous'

Los Angeles, June 24—(AP)—A mysterious cablegram reporting the birth of a nine pound son to Evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton in a Paris hospital was received last night by her husband, David L. Hutton, Jr., who branded this message as "ridiculous" as he ordered a telegram company to trace the sender.

The cablegram, dated June 23 and addressed to Hutton at his wife's church, Angelus Temple, read:

KINNEY'S FATE TO BE UNKNOWN FOR A FEW DAYS

Condition Of Would-Be Suicide Said To Be Grave

Peoria, June 24—(AP)—Garrett De Forrest Kinney, 64, former director of state finances, lay dangerously wounded on a hospital bed while physicians fought to save his life from a self-inflicted bullet wound, fired after a shortage of $526,000 had been found in his accounts.

Physicians said the climax would not be reached for several days, but that he was "holding his own" despite a loss of blood sustained when he sent the bullet through his head. Anti-tetanus serum was administered and he has been in a state of coma.

The shortage laid at Kinney's door by state officials consisted of $352,803 of state funds in closed banks and $174,190 in his accounts as Finance Director.

Meanwhile, at Springfield evidence was given yesterday by A. M. Fitzgerald, attorney for the receiver of the closed Ridgely-Farmers' State Bank, that Kinney had made numerous short-time transfers of state funds into the institution.

Fitzgerald testified at a Circuit Court hearing of a claim filed by the state to recover approximately $550,000 in deposits from the Springfield bank. A few hours before he shot himself Kinney had been served with a subpoena to attend the hearing.

In addition to the local account Fitzgerald said Kinney kept deposits in Peoria, Galesburg, Jacksonville and Chicago banks.

Merger Of Couple Of Railway Unions Considered Likely

Cleveland, June 24—(AP)—Tremendous losses in membership by railroad brotherhoods during the last three years were studied today by committees discussing the feasibility of uniting the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen.

On Jan. 1, 1930, the former organization had about 90,000 members while the latter had 110,000. Their membership at present is nearly equal, each having about 62,000.

A plea for consolidation was made before the seventh triennial convention of the B. of L. E. by David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen. He termed the maintenance of separate organizations "irrational and illogical."

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen endorsed the proposal to unite with the B. of L. E. at its 1931 convention. The B. of L. E. is expected to act on the proposition at its convention now in session.

Discount Story Of Double Murder By Reformatory Ward

Hammond, Ind., June 24—(AP)—Several days futile digging have caused Lake county authorities to discount the story of a reformatory inmate that he killed a young man and a young woman and buried their bodies near Hammond Concordia cemetery four years ago.

Woodrow J. Cochran, serving a sentence for assault and battery, was returned to the reformatory after officers said they had exhausted all efforts to substantiate the young man's story.

Danville, Ill., June 24—(AP)—James Rollins, former teller of the First National Bank of Champaign, was sentenced to two years in the Chillicothe, O. reformatory today by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley on a plea of guilty to embezzlement.

SEC. HULL AND SEN. J. COUZENS DO NOT AGREE

Interviews Given In London Indicate Opposing Views

London, June 24—(AP)—Repeated suggestions that the American domestic program for economic recovery is irreconcilable with international cooperation may be fomented by forces interested in the failure of the world economic conference, Cordell Hull, American Secretary of State, said today.

The Secretary of State said "there is no basis and no logic" in the thought that the American problem here and that a home are incompatible, as has been suggested, particularly since the American refusal to participate in de facto currency stabilization.

"It is, I think, obvious that in time of emergency such as this each country must resort to whatever feasible methods are requisite to bring about an increase in commodity prices, with accompanying projects safeguarding that country in the face of the general chaos of international trade," Hull said.

"There is no reason that I can conceive why these respective programs, having for their purpose business recovery with full employment, suitable wages and satisfactory price levels, should not have the united support of all those who are sincerely striving for the international economic cooperation so indispensable to permanent recovery."

Recognize Situation

Referring to the American delegation's situation introduced last Thursday, calling for concerted credit expansion and public works programs, Hull said it was framed "with full knowledge and appreciation both of America's domestic program and the proposal for an internationally coordinated monetary and economic policy for all nations to pursue at the same time in order to stimulate business and improve prices."

"He added that it was framed, in the exact language in which it was presented before the delegation said, and that nothing had happened either here or at home to change the situation, or to make the pursuance of domestic and international policy more difficult."

Senator James Couzens of Michigan, one of the American delegates to the London conference, said last Monday in London that there was conflict between the international and domestic programs of the United States.

"So far as America is concerned," Couzens said, "between the time of the calling of the conference and the present, a nationalistic economic program has been developed which seems to indicate that internationalism will conflict quite severely with our national economic program."

"If my analysis is correct we cannot carry through both programs. Sooner or later in the conference we shall have to decide which program we are going to follow."

2 WORKERS ON SAME POLE MET DEATH FRIDAY

One Lineman Working At Carthage Died A Hero

Carthage, Ill., June 24—(AP)—Two men, working on a transmission line, were electrocuted, one of them dying when he tried to rescue his fellow worker atop a pole near Basco, Ill., late yesterday. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death today.

The victims were Raymond Ashford, 39, of Jerseyville, and Herbert A. Nagle, 36, of Bushnell. They were rebuilding a transmission line for the Central Illinois Public Service Company.

Both were riding the same pole, soldering taps. Nagle touched the power line and Ashford, working above him, came down to help Nagle free himself from the wire. As Ashford touched the circuit his clothing burst into flames and he died instantly.

W. F. Hicks, groundman, hurried for aid. Nagle was still alive when the rescuers returned and begged them to take Ashford down first. He died before the power could be shut off. Nagle was married.

HOPE ABANDONED THAT LINCOLN'S CABIN IS EXTANT

Disappeared After It Was Taken To Chicago In 1891

Chicago, June 24—(AP)—Last pages of a book, telling all that may be told of the mysterious disappearance prior to the last Chicago World's Fair of the Abraham Lincoln log cabin, were written today by the sole survivor of the association formed in 1890 to preserve it as a memorial.

Forty years since then have served to kill all hope that the cabin Lincoln split rails for and helped build, and which was the home of his mother thirty years ago, would ever be found. Efforts now center on reconstruction of the cabin, by the measurements and detailed description made when it was taken apart in 1891 and brought to Chicago from its original site in Coles county.

Mrs. Eleanor Gridley, 87, who supervised the removal, and has written her second book about the cabin, said John Hall, Lincoln's cousin, received $10,000 for it.

Put In Storage

In Chicago it was reassembled in the Exposition Building of the Interstate Fair, pending the opening of the Columbian Exposition. Finally, it was put in storage, for safe keeping when the World's Fair was postponed for a year, and Mrs. Gridley went to Europe.

When she returned, she related, she was appalled to find the storage room empty. And from Mr. Gunther, the storage house proprietor, all she ever learned was:

"Perhaps you may find your cabin in the bottom of the sea!"

Finally she said she had come to believe that the persons responsible, necessarily of powerful influence, were those who assumed the humble origin of Abraham Lincoln and eager to prevent the exhibition at the World's Fair of the cabin he helped build for his mother.

Minor Accident On Route 2 Last Eve

Two cars were considerably damaged last evening in a wreck which occurred near the Brierton school on state highway route 2 about 10 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Chapman, Misses Lois Coppins and Eleanor Hennessey and William McLeod were returning to Dixon if the Chapman car when a collision occurred with another machine going in the opposite direction and driven by Edward Brooks, who resides at the Blackhawk cottages.

Miss Coppins sustained cuts from broken glass and was removed to the hospital where her injuries were dressed and then taken to her home. The others were considerably shaken up but were not seriously injured.

SCRATCH MR. KHAYYAM

New York, June 24—(AP)—Mrs. James M. Austin's Mr. Khayyam, winner of the Wood Memorial and the American Derby, today was scratched from the Dwyer Stakes, leaving five colts and one filly to match strides over one and one-half miles at Aqueduct.

In many quarters the week-end rest came as a welcome respite after the battles of the week and prospects of further conflict next week as the American monetary-silver and tariff resolutions are taken up.

Despite the cessation of formal conference work, however, conversations continued among delegates and plans were further discussed.

The week-end found a decidedly more optimistic atmosphere surrounding the conference than existed a few days ago, when the stabilization battle was at its height, and some gold standard countries, including France, apparently were prepared to walk out of the meeting.

DIRKSEN PLANS DISTANCE TEST OF HI-BALL GAS

Pekin, Ill. Congressman Is Not Satisfied With A. A. A. Trials

Washington, June 24—(AP)—Rep. Everett M. Dirksen, Republican of Pekin, Ill., announced today plans for a cross-country test of fuel gasoline blended with 10 per cent of alcohol manufactured from American farm products were about completed.

Dirksen's plans for a distance test to establish the efficiency of the blended fuel under ordinary conditions of travel were formulated after an unfavorable report released by the American Automobile Association as the result of a series of ten mile tests held here early this month using the mixed fuel.

"We are most anxious," Dirksen said, "to determine whether the blended gasoline really works under the conditions in which it would be used by the average motorist; whether it actually impairs the usefulness of motors; whether it gives fewer miles to gallon as has been claimed, and whether it proves more expensive than unblended gasoline."

For these purposes, Dirksen said he planned that two medium priced cars of identical make would run between two distant points, driven under identical conditions, by drivers who would alternate between cars. The experiment would be conducted under the strictest possible surveillance of "any and all" who could establish themselves sufficiently competent to judge such matters in the tests.

"While I am a vigorous proponent of the blended fuel movement," said Dirksen, "I am more anxious that this test be held under the most important conditions. In other words, I am intent upon discovering the exact degree of usefulness of the blend."

Dirksen had no trouble in procuring two medium priced cars for the distance test from a manufacturer who is opposed to the blended fuel. Other expenses, he said, would be borne by industries interested in the tests.

Route Is Difficult

"The route of the test cars is causing us the greatest difficulty," he continued. "Obviously we are anxious to get the most out of such an experiment, but in all, such a thing costs money. Therefore it has been proposed that we limit the route from New York City to

PACK UP AND GET OUT—TO THE PICNIC

Deviled Eggs Will Add Zest To Your Outing

These are the days to paraphrase the old army song and "pack up your vittles in the old lunch basket and smile, smile, smile!"

Call them picnic lunches, or old-fashioned basket dinners, or al fresco meals—they all are the answer to summer's urge to get out in the open and enjoy life.

Your basket can contain anything you want. But given a good salad, sandwiches or crackers and cheese, some relish, a hot drink, fruit and some sweets, and you are set to enjoy yourself. However, good planning is the secret of the successful outdoor meal. And good packing.

MRS. FORSYTH TO LEAVE FOR TRIP ABROAD WEDNESDAY

Next Wednesday, June 29th, Mrs. Helen Forsyth is leaving Chicago for New York City to sail about the fifteenth of July for Europe with a party of about twenty-five for a Mediterranean cruise with Prof. and Mrs. Boardman of the University of New York heading the party. Prof. Boardman is to give lectures on all interesting cities and places. The party sails on the new motor-driven liner Roma. The first country to be visited is Spain, stopping at Gibraltar, Malaga, Grenada and then on to the Riviera. They will spend some time in Italy, stopping longest in Rome, Florence, Venice and Naples and Milan. They will visit Lake Maggiore, Switzerland, Lucerne and some of the juice

1-2 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.
Salt and pepper to taste, add a dash of cayenne, three drops of onion juice and the juice of one lemon.

Mix these ingredients carefully with the egg yolks, which results in a soft paste which is just moist enough to pack well when put back into the eggs.

Pile the filling high into each egg, shaping them up with the back of a fork when filled. Dash paprika over the top of each egg.

Place eggs carefully on a platter and garnish with parsley, celery ends or lettuce and radish buds. Cover the dish entirely with cellophane immediately and put into the icebox until ready to pack.

On another dish arrange your lettuce and sliced tomatoes. Use paper plates and pasteboard forks and spoons, pasteboard cups and paper napkins. Your picnic will be twice as easy to take care of.

Babies of Young Parents, Pro and Con

I like young parents. When I see a young woman wheeling a baby, looking more like his sister than his mother it warms my heart. Youth is the time to have families. And incidentally his depression is ruining the chances of our next generation of babies to have just such young parents, for marriage has been next to impossible for young people.

Not only that but there has been no money for Mary, 20, wedded to John, 23, to have any babies yet. However not all Marys nor Johns have waited. I see a number of these girl-mothers about.

Yet it is a queer way nature has sometimes of producing her young. She puts her babies into the arms of mothers so young that they have not yet learned the word caution.

Babies "Take" a Lot

Perhaps it is best so. If mothers worried about everything the way grandmothers do, they would be nervous wrecks. Little children would be even more hampered and inhibited than they are and the race would soon lose its spirit of adventure and enterprise.

Yet I believe the young mother is too prone to take her baby's safety too much for granted. She wants to see a movie and off she goes, baby too, to see John Barrymore push Lionel under the ice. She wants to shop, so baby goes along to pass on whether a blue serge suit or a gray fur-trimmed coat is more becoming to Mama. She has the crowd in and baby us up all evening, first on one lap and then another, enjoying the vicarious smokes of a hundred cigarettes and rumpaling the cards in the dummy just when the player is deciding on a finesse.

Treated So Casually!

The little creature is taken so for granted, like a new puppy, or a knitting bag! He is just part and parcel of life to be trotted along everywhere and treated as casually as a basket of groceries.

It amuses me but it terrifies me. The strange part of it is that babies so treated are as good as gold mostly.

I believe that most of these little tykes are fed pretty regularly, because one thing that has sunk

Water-Proofed Linens for Sport

Your Game May Be "All Wet"—But You Needn't Be!

By JOAN SAVOY
NEA Service Writer

Everybody knows some cheerful soul who is merry enough to go about singing in the rain.

Well, there are new sports things on the market these days that allow you not only to sing in the rain but to play golf or tramp about in the rain without getting to look like a drowned rat.

They are made of water-proofed linen. Not only is it designed to shed linen like the proverbial duck's back but it doesn't spot, which is a blessing.

Of course you don't need to reserve costumes of this type just for rain. They are less crumple than ordinary linen so, of course, they are a boon to the shopper or office worker who has a way of sitting wrinkles in everything, in summer time.

If you've gone in for white in a big way there is a chic white three-quarters coat that is particularly good for golfing because it isn't the kind of swager model that might get into the way of your strokes. It has big-topped sleeves, is belted, but fits the body neatly so it doesn't interfere with action. It buttons with a single black button at the top, in case you want to wear it over black.

Worn over a black dress, with a white hat, and black and white shoes, you can face sun or rain with equal poise and the sustaining certainty that your costume will stand up.

A black golf or tennis dress is made of the same water-proofed linen. It has the summer's suntan black line, is sleeveless, belted neatly with a single black button at the top, in case you want to wear it over black.

MONEY DOESN'T MAKE A HAPPY MARRIAGE

The story of the rich girl who marries the poor boy is always popular especially so, no doubt, in these days, when rich girls are comparatively few and poor boys are extremely numerous. And the recent news that the daughter of a rich Minneapolis flour magnate is marrying a young assistant librarian at Yale, and is going to live with him on his $45 a week salary, is one of the most appealing little incidents of the spring.

It is appealing not only because it fails in the old romantic tradition. It seems, somehow, to point a moral, to underline a lesson, for a whole era.

During the boom years a great many young people got the notion that marriage was a thing of be attempted only if the young husband-to-be had laid away a good supply of ready cash. A lot of young women felt that their husbands ought to be able to support them in the style to which they were accustomed; a lot of young men felt that it was perfectly natural and right for the girls to feel this way.

That attitude isn't so common, nowadays. There would be precious few marriages if it were. Young people, with the crash of prosperity, learned how to get back into the old attitude of youth; they re-developed youth's traditional readiness to take a chance. This flour magnate's daughter, going off to begin married life just as one of her father's stenographers would, typifies this change.

And it is one of the most wholesome things that could happen to us as a nation.

To be sure, the girl who marries nowadays, taking a lad who has only a small salary, practically no savings and nothing extra in the way of prospects, is taking a chance. But what of it? Any marriage is a gamble; and the young couple who gamble that their love will carry them through financial difficulties are probably taking the least chance of any.

The very fact that they are gambling, indeed, is one of the things that can help their marriage to be happy. To struggle together, to endure hardships together, to be brave together in the face of a hostile world—isn't that of the very essence of young love?

The young married couples of 1933 may have fewer automobiles, fewer summer vacations, fewer suburban houses and fewer gay parties than those of 1929 did; but it is a fairly safe bet, too, that they will make fewer trips to Reno.

JAPAN'S COURSE IN CHINA

It has been the custom in this country for some time to hold up pious hands in horror over the things Japan has been doing to China. But Nathaniel Peffer, in a recent issue of the New Republic, points out that as a nation we have slight reason to be shocked about it all.

Ever since the war, as he points out, China has been struggling to regain independence of foreign domination. She has tried to clear her soil of foreign troops, to get equal representation in the foreign-concession ports, to abolish the rights of extra-territoriality. We, along with European nations, refused to give her these things—on the ground that China was in turmoil and had no unified government.

By so doing, as Mr. Peffer points out, we provided Japan with a perfect excuse for aggression in Manchuria, Jehol and elsewhere. "When we enunciated the principle that disorder in a weak country justifies a strong one in invading it," he remarks, "we laid the foundations of Japan's defense."

INDEPENDENCE DAY'S TOLL

On the morning of July 5, unless this year differs from all previous ones, American newspapers will tell their readers of several scores of fatal accidents which took place on the Independence Day holiday. A certain number of people will be killed by fireworks; more will be accidentally drowned; a very large number will die under the wheels of automobiles.

Today each of those persons is alive, well and unsuspecting of his fate. Each one knows, if he thinks about it at all, that July Fourth will bring a number of fatalities to the country; but not one has the slightest notion that his own death will be on the list.

And because none of us can imagine that these accidents can touch us personally, there isn't much hope that this year's toll will be smaller than usual. That extra bit of caution that prevents accidents won't get used, in a certain number of cases; and a certain number of us, as a result, will not see the sun rise on the fifth of July.

Today the best education is none too good for the young American; he will need it all. And the country needs to have him have it; for it requires trained intelligence as never before.—U. S. Supreme Court Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo.

Most teachers of French in our senior high schools would have to have an interpreter in Paris.—Dr. George Willard Frasier, president of Colorado Teachers' College.

Africa is the only peaceful, quiet continent, without tyrants, without dictators, without danger of revolution or war.—Gyulielmo Ferrero, historian.

"Now, let's be patient," Scouty said. "I think, if I just use my head, that I can think of some good plan to help poor Dotty out."

"The tree that's holding her is tall and we would have no chance at all to pull her from the limbs. Oh, my, just hear the poor girl's about."

"She's merely scared," said Windy. "She seems just as safe as safe can be as long as that old tree hangs on and doesn't let her drop."

"Perhaps the tree's just having fun, and likes to play beneath the sun. It's running now. I wish I knew how I could make it stop."

Poor Dotty, in the meantime, was a very frightened girl because she still was held high in the air. "Please put me down," she cried.

"I'd rather be right on the ground. Your running makes me bob around. Why did I let you catch me, when I had a chance to hide?"

"Well, I don't know," the big tree snapped, "but in my long arm you were trapped. I haven't any playmates so I think I'll keep you here."

"As long as you treat me real kind I will do nothing you will mind, but if you get real naughty you will have a lot to fear."

Wee Duncy heard this and he cried, "I have a plan that can be tried. Our good old friend the Inp gave me a funny magic flute."

"He said, 'If something goes amiss don't worry, son! Just blow on this.' Now, listen, and you will shortly hear me make it too!"

"All right, we're waiting," Scouty said. "Why hesitate, lad? Go ahead. However, I can't see what good a thing like that can do."

"Well, soon find out," cried Duncy. Then he took once, and once again. "That's terrible," said Goldy. "Kindly hurry and get through."

Mrs. F. D. Lahman Died

This community was thoroughly shocked Sunday morning when word was passed around that Mrs. F. D. Lahman had died at her home very expected. Although she had been ailing and a nurse, Miss Goldia Graves was caring for her, her condition was not thought so serious. She was ill about three days. Mrs. Lahman was about 69 years of age and was born on the Pollock farm north of Ashton, later she and her mother moved to Ashton. She graduated from the Ashton high school in 1882. For many years she has resided east of town. Her husband, Freeman Lahman preceded her in death about five years ago. She is survived by one son, Carol Lahman, one brother, Louis Pollock of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and two grand children.

Funeral services were held on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Presbyterian church. A full obituary will be published next week.

The Pool is Great

The swimming pool is the most attractive place in town these hot days. Sunday afternoon and evening saw a large crowd in the pool. The heat was intense and the pool proved a delightful resort. During the week large crowds from surrounding towns have enjoyed the pool and the beautiful grove surrounding it. A perfectly lovely place for a picnic. Several tables with benches, good drinking water near the tables added to that an ideal pool for swimming. An entire afternoon and evening can be enjoyed at the camp grounds, for very little money. A child under 12 years of age can enjoy the pool all afternoon for the sum of ten cents. Adults 15 cents for an entire afternoon. There is a corner fenced off for the kiddies that makes it perfectly safe for them to have just lots of fun. Anyone not using the pool is allowed to enter free of charge and enjoy watching the swimmers.

The Dixon soft ball league has been invited to enter one or more teams in the International Soft Ball Tournament Association world's championship to be played at Milwaukee, Wis., August 26 to 31. The games will be played on diamonds laid out in the parks and playgrounds of Milwaukee. The important games will be played in Juneau Park, on diamonds that will be especially created for the tournament.

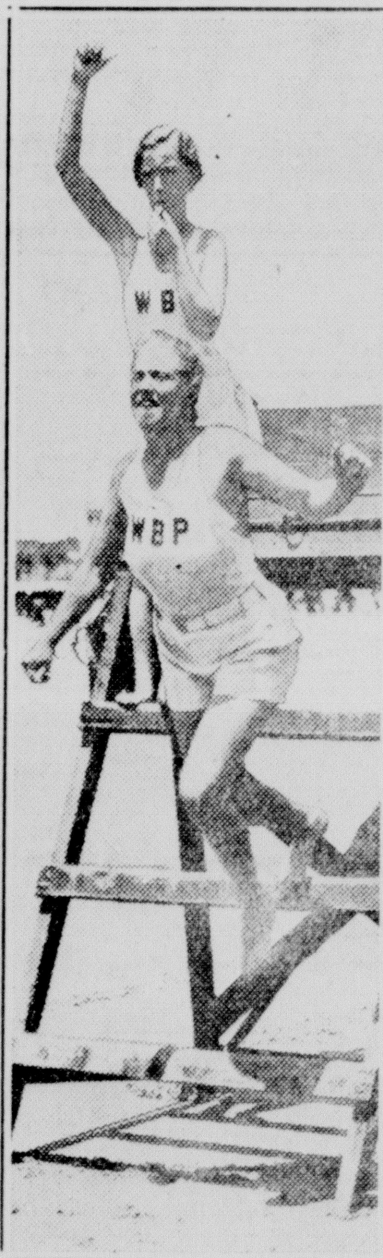

The tournament will be played under the National Playground rules with the exception of the semi-final and final games, which will be nine innings in length instead of the usual seven. Umpires will be furnished by the National Umpires Association, who will be required to pass a severe test before they will be allowed to officiate. Balls will be furnished for the games, and the ball adopted by the International Soft Ball Association will be the only ball used.

To Provide Trophies
Entrance to the games is open to any team, champion or non-champion, as long as the team believes itself good enough to compete. An entrance fee is charged any team entering the tournament. This amount is placed in a fund, which will be used to purchase equipment and defray other necessary expenses. Beautiful trophies will be given to the winning team, with a large beautiful traveling trophy, standing between three and four feet high to be played for annually. The tournament will be held in conjunction with the thirty-fourth annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Some of the managers of the local soft ball teams are considering entering a team to represent Dixon in the tourney. A supply of entry blanks have been forwarded to Treasurer Earl James of the Dixon soft ball league, together with other information, which will be furnished the managers of teams contemplating entering the tournament.

Saving Graces

You can expect a lot of male bathers to founder around in the surf at Wildwood, N. J., this summer. For feminine life guards now occupy the high perches where manhood formerly sat enthroned. Here's Florence Newton of the Wildwood Beach Patrol springing to the rescue as May Otley blows her warning whistle.

Paikowski and Szymanski

No, the two fellows above aren't Polish diplomats. They're a couple of Milwaukee boys who made good in sports. Frankie Paikowski, left, is known as Frankie Parker on the tennis court. The gent on the right, Al Szymanski, better known to American League pitchers as Al Simmons, the circuit's leading hitter. They met at an exhibition game the White Sox played in Milwaukee.

Laurette Feature Next Week's Show

Preston "Grandpa" Laurette of Marseilles, a favorite with local boxing fans, will be featured in next week's fistic card at the Dixon Athletic Club's Maple arena next Thursday evening. Laurette appeared before local crowds last season and became quite a favorite. He is said to be in excellent condition this season and last Monday evening scored a knockout over a Golden Glove champ in the 126 pound class at LaSalle.

Laurette has been matched to meet Dwight Pollard of Rock Island, a hard hitting slugger with a long list of victories. Another all-star bout will feature the double-windup of next week's bill, Wilson and Doty, local boxers who made such good showings on the opening card Thursday evening, will appear on the program. Matchmaker Ed Hooker stated today.

Two Senators Pounded Ball Viciously To Better Places

New York, June 24—(AP)—The continued heavy hitting of Heinie Manush and Joe Cronin of Washington dwarfed all other betting performances in the major leagues in the past week although several National Leaguers showed notable gains.

In the seven days which ended yesterday's games, Manush drove out 21 hits and Cronin 19 to gain second and third places in the batting list. The former had an average of .354, while Cronin was only one point behind.

In contrast, Al Simmons of Chicago, American League leader, made only nine hits and fell off 13 points to .365 while Ben Chapman of New York and Fred Schulte of Washington, wound up in the fourth and fifth notches.

Pepper Martin of the St. Louis Cardinals, last week's National League pace setter, revealed the only falling average in the elder circuit as Randy Moore of Boston and Jimmy Collins of St. Louis registered 20 point gains and Spud Davis of Philadelphia picked up 18. Martin dropped to fourth place, yielding the top to Chuck Klein, Phillies slugger at .362.

The struggle between Klein and Lou Gehrig of the Yankees for slugging honors was a stalemate as each finished with three first places and one second in his league. Their pace setting totals were 56 runs batted in, 21 doubles and 13 home runs for Klein, and 61 runs, 63 runs batted in and 17 homers for Gehrig.

City League Stars Defeated Franklin

Gene Fane of the Dixon team hit the first base pitched for a clean triple and the locals then staged a batting clamped scoring eight runs in the opening round. Triples were recorded by Meinke, Barefield, Fane and Wedlake. Miller, Stultz, Meinke, D. Zoeller and Tamplin hit doubles during the game. The score by innings:

ROSS SURPRISED CANZONERI LAST EVE IN CHICAGO

Took Lightweight Title Away From New York Italian

By WILLIAM WEEKS (Associated Press Sports Writer.)
Chicago, June 24—(AP)—Barney Ross—born Bernard Rossofsky, 22 years ago—has ended the rule of Tony Canzoneri, one of boxing's grandest champions, over the world's lightweights.

Only three years away from amateur and golden gloves triumphs, the youth from Chicago's Ghetto last night worked out just enough of a margin over the New York Italian after ten rounds of bitter, vicious fighting, to win the 135-pound title. The fight was so close that Referee Tommy Gilmore called it a draw. However the judges, Edward A. Hintz and William A. Battye, figured that Ross' edge was enough to take the title away from Canzoneri.

The small crowd of 11,204 spectators expressed very definite disapproval of the verdict, but later cheered the home boy who had upset the fighter characterized as the best in the world, pound for pound.

Canzoneri heard the decision with an expression of shocked amazement. His famous grin faded and was replaced by a look of bewilderment as he realized that the title he won three years ago from Al Singer and defended against Kid Chocolate, Billy Petrolle and Jack (Kid) Berg, had been taken from him.

The new champion, nervous and fidgety as he awaited the verdict, capered about the ring in his happiness as he heard himself proclaimed.

After an experimental first round, Canzoneri, making Ross fight almost as he wished, went right out after a knockout. He battered the young Chicagoan about with stinging rights to the head and jaw, but could not make him hold still for a knockout punch. Ross, however, was following instructions, and even when tempted to slug with the grinning, bobbing titleholder, refrained until the seventh round. By that time Canzoneri had built up a respectable lead.

Figured Ross Tired

Apparently figuring that Ross was as tired as himself, and that his lead would stand, the champion started to coast. Ross was on him like a hawk, firing steaming left hooks into his face and scoring with his right. Canzoneri, tiring, but still cunning, attempted to slow Ross down by the eighth by tying him up after brief exchanges, only to have the youngster pile in with both hands, outscore him and make him miss.

Inspired by his success in the seventh, eighth, and ninth, Ross let go with everything in the final stand. Canzoneri almost matched him, but was just short of gaining an even break.

To win a chance at the championship, Ross turned in decisive victories over Bat Battalino, the tough Hartford, Conn. Italian, and Billy Petrolle, the much tougher old gentleman from Fargo, N. D., who failed to lift the title from Canzoneri.

Canzoneri, according to the new titleholder, may have a return match at any time. His management, however, plans to reap something in addition to glory, before putting the title on the block.

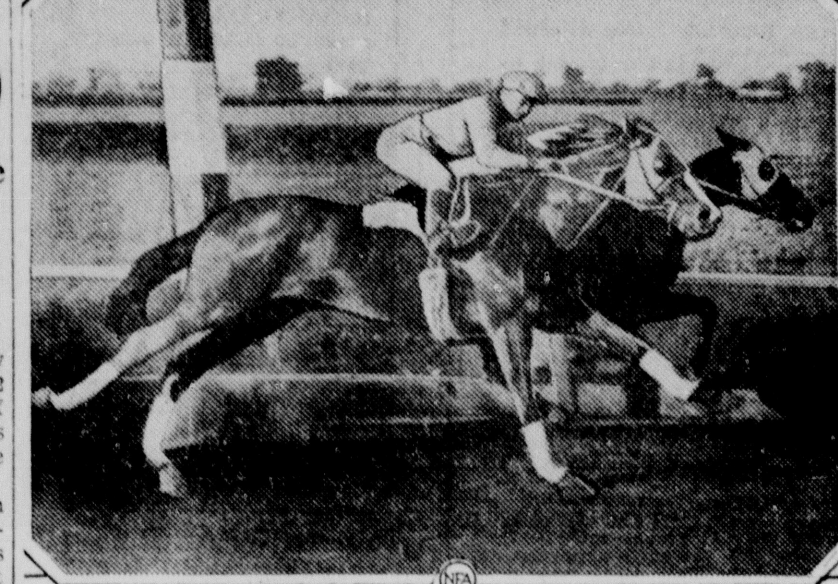

Canzoneri was guaranteed 40 per cent of net receipts, amounting to about $18,000. Ross fought for much less.

HOOVER STARTS WRITING MUCH SECRET HISTORY

The Former President Is Devoting Himself To Old Hobby

Stanford University, Calif., June 24—(AP)—In the cloistered calm of campus surroundings, former President Herbert C. Hoover will soon set quietly to work at a new task—the preservation for posterity of history that never has been told.

New shelves are going up in the archives of the Stanford library and a "work room" is taking shape in a wing of the building where the man who was directing a nation a few months ago will pore over documents in many languages and map out research procedure for assistants.

Hoover will be devoting himself to an old hobby in his new role. The Hoover War Library—the large collection of its kind—was founded in 1919 with funds provided by him. Ever since, he has talked to University associates of the day when he could find time to outline to librarians the scope of the material awaiting classification.

Some of the material probably will be edited for publication under his direction, librarians said. Much of it, however, is secret and sealed, not to be made public for many years. Men must die before some of the documents are read. Governments must fall, or pass into other hands.

Among the several million items now included in the growing collection are documents dealing with war negotiations of almost all the countries in the world. During the armistice, Mr. Hoover, as Food Relief Administrator, was in intimate touch with all the governments of Europe.

"And I was informal enough," he said in an informal conference with newspaper men the summer before his election in 1928, "to utilize that intimacy in securing war documents from all governments as a personal favor to me."

SENATORS TAKE LEAD IN JUNIOR LEAGUE FRIDAY

Their Big Push Finally Puts Them At Top Of The Bunch

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

Associated Press Sports Writer

The Washington Senators, driving almost without interruption toward the American League lead for two weeks, finally have attained their goal. And present indications are that it will be quite a job to dislodge them.

The Senators stepped into undisputed possession of first place yesterday by beating the Chicago White Sox 7 to 3 while the New York Yankees, after hammering out a 10-6 victory over the St. Louis Browns in the first game of a doubleheader, lost the second, 5-4 to drop a half game behind.

Washington now has pounded out eleven victories in 12 starts, has rolled up totals of 179 hits and 112 runs, never has dropped below ten hits to the game and only once has fallen below seven runs. Yesterday's triumph was just another of the same sort. Al Thomas gave the Sox 7 to 3 before he was lifted in the eighth while his former roommate and close friend, Ted Lyons gave up 16, six of them by the pace setting swatters Heinie Manush and Joe Cronin.

Yank Pitchers Fail

The Yanks again ran into the painful combination of weak pitching and fielding. Neither Herb Pennock nor Charley Ruffing could go the route and two errors helped give the Browns three runs in the eighth and the decision in the second game. A six run outburst in the third and Babe Ruth's 16th homer were enough to win the opener.

The Philadelphia Athletics, with Dibs Williams and Eric McNair acting like a whole ball team, placed themselves only a half game behind the third place Cleveland Indians 8-4.

Williams and McNair hit a homer apiece and drove in all their team's runs. The Boston Red Sox made it three out of four against Detroit by punching their hits nicely off Schoolboy Rowe to win 3-2.

In National League

The second division clubs took all the "play" in the National League, leaving the standing of the leaders unchanged. Home runs by Ernie Lombardi and Sparky Admas and Eppa Rixey's six hit pitching enabled the Cincinnati Reds to break a five game losing streak with a 2-1 victory over the league leading New York Giants.

The last place Phillies assaulted Dizzy Dean for eight runs in the eighth and defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 9 to 4 for their sixth straight triumph. Brooklyn's Dodgers finally solved Larry French's southpaw delivery in the eighth and put on a five run rally, topped by Tony Cuccinelli's homer with the bases full, and beat Pittsburgh for the second time 5-4. Boston and Chicago had a day off.

Mr. Gwynn has his doubts about the ultimate success of this plan

A BOOK A DAY

DE VALERA'S FIGHT FOR IRISH FREEDOM

By Bruce Catton

The way in which a fighter for political freedom can gradually develop into a social revolutionary is strikingly brought out in "De Valera" a biography of the famous Irish Free chieftain by Dennis Gwynn.

Mr. Gwynn starts by tracing De Valera's long fight against England; the fight that began with the Easter Week uprising of 1916, when De Valera emerged overnight from obscurity and became a national hero, and which has continued down to the present war over the oath of allegiance.

In this fight De Valera has been amazingly successful. He has been as Mr. Gwynn points out, obstinate, opinionated, vain, sometimes downright cantankerous—but he has brought Ireland to the very threshold of full independence, and he has shown himself to be one of the ablest political strategists Ireland ever produced.

Now Mr. Gwynn points out, De Valera's struggle for a self-contained Ireland has taken a new turn. It has become not so much a fight for freedom from British political domination as a struggle for the masses against the money power. De Valera speaks not only for political independence but also for economic freedom.

Mr. Gwynn has his doubts about the ultimate success of this plan

BARGAIN BRIDIE

KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

1933 SEA SERVICE, N.C.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BARRITT COLVIN, back in New York after years abroad, falls in love with ELINOR STAFFORD. Barritt is 35, wealthy, and has made a name for himself as an archeologist, carrying on for herself. Lida is a beautiful mother, has kept the girl in the background, wanting attention for herself. Lida is VANCE CARTER and constantly scheming to keep the girl in the background. She tells Barritt that if her husband learns of the affair he will never forgive her.

Years before Barritt shielded his half-sister, MARCIA, when a youthful romance ended disastrously. Marcia had a son whom Barritt adopted. She tells Barritt that if her husband learns of the affair he will never forgive her.

Lida goes to Miami. Elinor is glad, knowing that with her mother away she will have some chance to hold Barritt's interest. She sees him frequently during the three weeks her mother is away. Then Lida returns unexpectedly. She enters the apartment, hears Elinor talking to a man and listens, deliberately eavesdropping.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

LIDA leaned forward, listening

frankly. She wanted to know what Elinor and the young man were saying. Her eyes took in a huge bouquet of red roses on a table in the hall. Beyond, in the drawing room, she saw butterfly orchids in a silver bowl.

Then she heard Elinor say, "But, Barry—"

It was Barritt Colvin, Lida realized. She did not want to have Barritt Colvin devoted to Elinor! She wanted him to admire her; to recite her good qualities to Miss Ella Sexton who was devoted to Barry and obviously easily influenced by him.

A tragedy it would be, Lida decided swiftly, for Aunt Ella to leave the bulk of her fortune to Elinor. And Aunt Ella was quite likely to leave a large part of it to anyone Barritt Colvin admired. Elinor's tastes were too simple; Elinor would have been perfectly happy living on the smallest allowance while Lida simply had to have money! Elinor, of course, would give her mother what she needed but Lida did not want her daughter in the position where she could give, nor have her capable of spending what she pleased and where she pleased. Elinor would be altogether too generous with such people as the Thropes and Philip Sexton.

"Any young girl is better off for control," Lida thought often. She could always make herself comfortable concerning any life and assure herself that whatever she wanted was the thing that was right.

She tiptoed a little closer to the drawing room doorway and stood close to a billowing curtain, pressed against the wall. Elinor was saying, "But I've never known anyone so fine as you are, Barry. It's ridiculous for you to keep harping on age as you do!"

He blurted out, "I want you to have the best!"

THERE was a silence. Then Lida heard his deep-drawn breath and knew he had kissed Elinor. "I didn't mean to do that before—!" he said and hesitated. He was going on, Lida was sure, to say "before I asked you to marry me."

Oh, but she could not have that! Lida moved swiftly toward the drawing room door. On the threshold she paused, knowing the picture she made.

"My dear, dear, dear child!" she exclaimed tremulously. She saw the color drain from Elinor's face and her eyes grow big and dark. Elinor had on a new dress and was wearing her hair in the way Lida had declared to be absurdly theatrical. Barritt Colvin did not like the interruption, she saw. He was flushed and looking sullen. But she would manage it so that he would thank her and later, with a little more managing, she could bring him to heel.

The envious malice asserted itself and brought a tinge of pink to Lida's lovely skin. It would be an absurd marriage for Elinor, she decided. Elinor would be far happier married to some poor man, putting about at housework as Bessie Thrope did, trying to stretch pennies and nickels, than attempting to manage the household of a millionaire.

"Be a little glad to see me, please, dear!" Lida begged wistfully of Elinor and very tenderly kissed her. She saw a question in Barritt Colvin's eyes which she knew (with satisfaction) had been put there by Elinor's turning a cool cheek for that kiss.

Lida laid her small hands on Elinor's shoulders. "I can't tell you how good it is to see you, my darling," she said, her voice full and throbbing. "I've missed you so much."

"It's going to be ridiculously easy," Lida thought. But she mustn't leave them alone until she had had a chance to speak to Barritt in private!

"Darling," Lida said, pulling off her gloves, "would you do something for mother?"

ELINOR stood like a stick. All her grace had been wiped away by resentment and growing fear. Yet surely, the girl thought, trying to down the ache that was beginning in her heart, he cared! He was too true, too loyal to be influenced now. If he could be changed by her mother he was not the man she had believed him to be. Nothing could be then as she had dreamed. Life would be—oh, it would be horrible!

Her heart cried out, "Please Barritt! Please understand!"

Lida went on, "I want you to telephone Aunt Ella to tell her I am back home safe, sweet, and dear Cousin Bessie and, of course, your father. They're all so absurdly anxious about my safety," she ended, turning to Barritt.

Without a word Elinor left the room, her knees weak. For the first time in her life she had been truly happy. For the first time she had realized what life might hold. And the moment before—she could hardly realize it now—Barritt had kissed her.

As she left the room Elinor could see, without turning her head to look back, that her mother was holding out an appealing hand to Barritt. Until that moment Lida had ignored him, apparently completely absorbed in her reunion with her daughter.

It took several minutes to telephone Bessie Thrope, Miss Ella

(who would talk, talk, talk), and her father for whom she had to wait. When Elinor returned she found Barritt still standing, looking rather white beneath his heavy tan, and with new lines around his mouth. He said, bowing stiffly, that he must leave.

"What have you done?" Elinor asked as she heard Benson close the outer door after him.

"But what can you mean, dear?" Lida questioned in turn and with an assumption of innocence that made Elinor know something very bad had happened.

"I mean what I say, Mother." Her voice shook. "Can't you—just for once—be honest? I love Barritt Colvin and he loves me. He was—going to tell me so when you came in—"

The child, Lida saw wearily, was going to make a scene. Elinor was crying, shaking.

"If he loves you, dear, of course he will tell you so. What could my coming have to do with it?" Elinor laughed suddenly, hysterically. Then, sobbing deeply, she turned and left the room.

BARRITT walked blindly, without knowing where he was heading. Mrs. Stafford had said (it came back slowly but all too clearly): "It is so good to find you here with Elinor!" He had thanked her, a trifle surprised at the way she had spoken the words.

"I was afraid," she went on hesitantly as she sat down, "that Bobby Telfair might be here. His influence is not at all good for my little Elinor. She is, I must confess, quite modern enough without—help. Can you get used to what these youngsters call 'necking,' Mr. Colvin?"

He had cleared his throat. He had murmured a stifled, "Why no—"

"Elinor is so appealing," Lida continued in a troubled way. "Everyone likes her, especially older men. She flatters them mercilessly into the feeling that they're young again and then laughs about it afterwards. Youth is so cruel, don't you think?"

He had moistened his lips, nodded.

"Little scamp!" Lida murmured and sighed. "Promise me you'll use your influence with her!" she appealed. He made no response. "I'm sure," Lida admitted laughing and ruefully, "that I won't have to cough loudly whenever I enter a room in which you are alone with Elinor!"

She sat silent then for a short time, apparently given over to her unhappy problem.

"I am, Mr. Colvin," she confessed with a sigh, "a rather old-fashioned sort of person, I fear. Some of the—amorous tableaux Elinor has provided for me have quite broken me up. I—," but her lips trembled. He saw her fumbling for a handkerchief and saw that she could not go on, that she had all she could do to regain control.

Elinor came in then. Barritt could not look at her. He could only stand dully, aching in every fiber and feeling a cheated fool. Somehow, he realized in the chill of the outer air, he had made his escape.

Where Ships Hunt for Mattern

Here is the area in which ships are searching for a trace of James Mattern and his plane. Mattern has not been sighted since he hopped from Khabarovsk, Soviet Siberia, for Nome, Alaska, in his fight around the world. The Navy's repair ship, Albatross, is searching the scores of islands in the Aleutian group, while other ships are on the lookout along the Siberian and Alaskan coasts. It is believed Mattern could live for two, or three weeks if he landed safely on one of the remote islands.

Brownell, in which she has scored a distinct success. On the occasion of Miss Frederick's last visit to the Cort Theatre she remained seventeen weeks in the comedy, "The Scarlet Woman."

"Her Majesty, the Widow" is in three acts, the scenes of which are laid in an aristocratic suburb of Boston, where society is distinctly exclusive and mothers devote much of their time attempting to select suitable mates for their offspring from this prescribed circle. The central figure of the play is a very wealthy widow, impersonated by Miss Frederick, who is much concerned over her only son's infatuation for a beautiful woman whose prospects are to be an adventure. The action of the play revolves around the various means adopted by the doting mother to confirm her suspicions, resulting in many humorous incidents, during which she is herself brought to a realization of a love affair of her own.

Critical writers of every city visited by Miss Frederick upon her present world tour have been united in declaring the star at her loveliest and best in this smart comedy, and have bestowed unstinted praise upon the individual members of the supporting company. These include: Isabel Withers, Grayce Hampton, Laurette Bullivant, Boyd Irwin, Thomas Chaterton, Carlyle Moore, Jr., and Frederick A. Bell. Complete and beautiful settings are carried with the company.

Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons during Miss Frederick's Chicago engagement, and a popular scale of prices has been announced.

Sidelights In News In Capital Of United States

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—The titular leaders of the House—Speaker Rainey, Floor Leader Eymis et al.—have issued no statements as to what they think of the way their democratic brethren acted during the special session of congress just concluded.

Aside from a few unpleasant moments, their leadership has had pretty smooth sailing notwithstanding the fact that the lash was applied with force at times.

To a man who has served 14 consecutive terms in the House; whose service dates back to March 4, 1907, the manner in which the House conducted itself during the three most crucial months perhaps in the history of the country, appears astounding.

Adolph Sabath of the fifth Illinois district has had opportunity to make comparisons.

An Inside View

Sabath says that he has never seen anything to compare with the performance of the House during the special session. To use his own words:

"When it is considered that approximately one-third of the House is composed of new members, many of them quite young men, with set views and a determination to force through legislation that they have advocated, it is remarkable how many of them submerged their honest convictions and aspirations and joined hands and manfully aided in enacting speedily the important legislation of this special session."

But while peace of joy are being sung, at the present and congratulations are being handed around freely, the very interesting question of what's going to happen in January when the regular session of the seventy-third Congress is convened comes to the fore.

One must not lose sight of the fact that the peace and harmony which prevailed in the House during the special session rested on an extraordinary foundation.

Chickens may be coming home to roost in January.

Then too, by the time January rolls around Postmaster General Farley will have passed a lot of pie over his patronage counter—perhaps all that is of any worth.

The stage will be all set for a battle of individualism in the House.

Chicago, June 20.—Radio broadcast from the stratosphere will be attempted for the first time in July when the balloon that carries Lieutenant-Commander T. G. W. Settle and one of the Piccard twins starts its ascension from Soldier Field on the grounds of A Century of Progress—the Chicago World's Fair.

The problem of installing the radio broadcasting apparatus in the gondola was not easy. According to C. B. Hanson, of the National Broadcasting Company, there was a multitude of details to be worked out so as to make the effort possible.

Experts from broadcasting companies' laboratories worked day and night to have the equipment ready for the flight. Mr. Hanson, who manages the company's technical operations and engineering, pointed out why the job was a tough one.

"Putting the sending equipment in the gondola for the purpose of talking back to the world would appear easy," he said, "but when even the food that is carried is governed by the weight factor, the limitations imposed called for infinite ingenuity."

Will Note Cosmic Rays.

"Bear in mind, that to reach higher altitudes than man has ever attained, the stratosphere balloon must have a high gas capacity and a light load to carry. Many other things besides radio must be carried. It is planned to carry two persons, a pilot and an observer, and also a number of scientific instruments."

"Due to the rarity of air at altitudes above ten miles, the gondola must be air-tight and capable of retaining normal atmospheric pressure. Food and water as well as oxygen tanks must be carried. A maximum of 100 pounds is all that can be permitted for the radio equipment."

These limitations forced the use of the high frequencies of the short wave band. In this case a frequency of 17,300 kilocycles has been selected to carry the voices from the gondola. This will permit the maximum transmission with the minimum of weight. In fact, the transmitter designed for this purpose weighs but sixty pounds with complete equipment of power and antenna, and will have an output of three watts, which is the equivalent of the amount of electricity used by the tail light of an automobile.

A receiver has also been provided for the observers to keep in touch with the ground crew. This portion of the radio equipment will be conducted on a frequency of approximately 6,100 kilocycles, or a wave length of 49 meters. The weight will be about forty pounds.

Pick Receiving Locations.

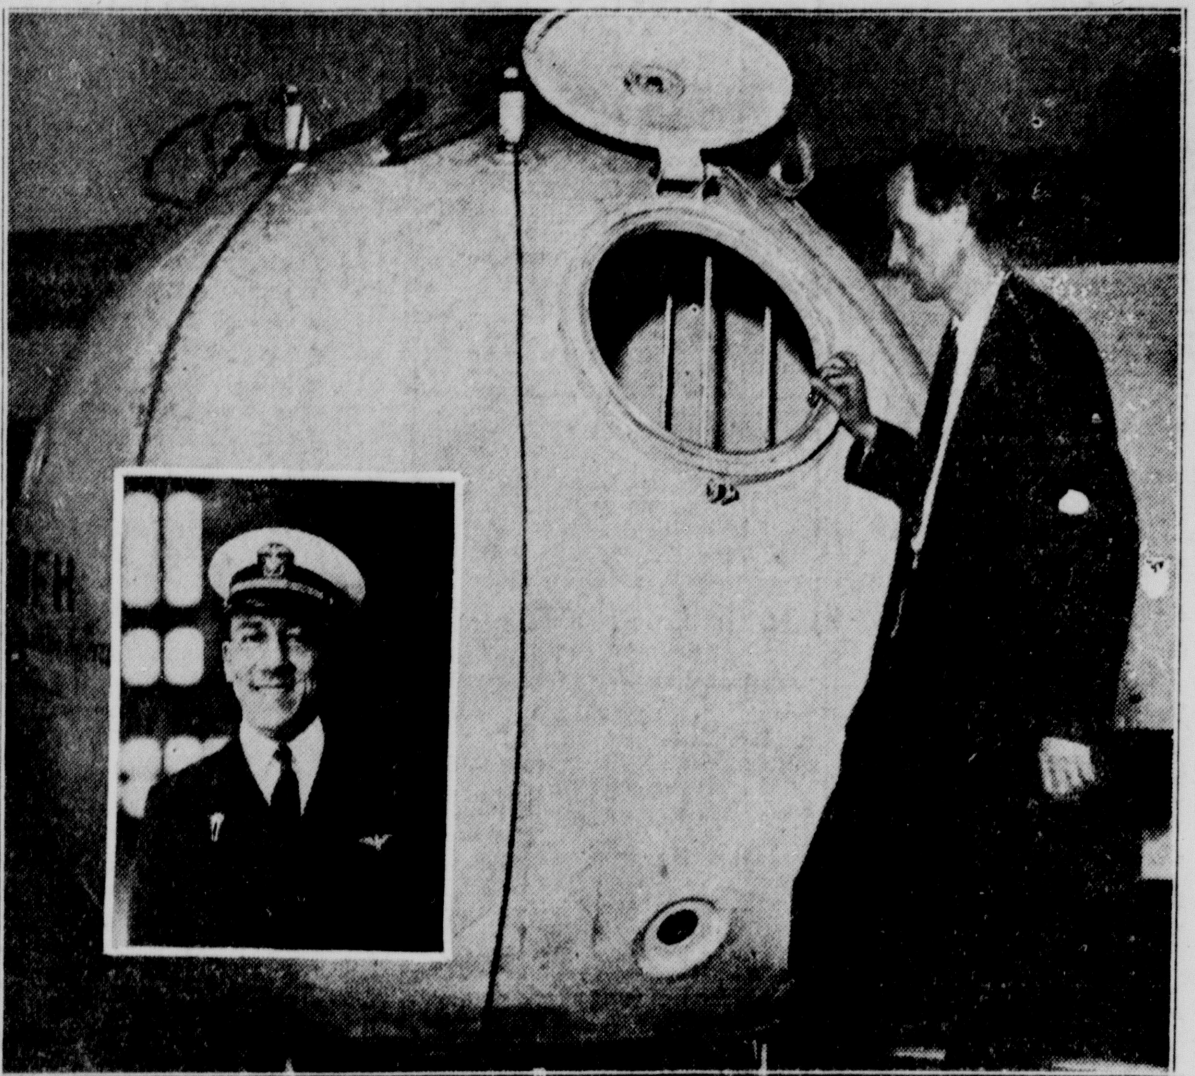

Because the flight may last as long as twenty-four hours, arrangements have been made to clear the networks for spot broadcasting from the balloon during the flight. The three most important periods during the flight will be the take-off, the point of maximum altitude, and the return to the earth. The exact time of these events is problematical, which will keep the engineering staff constantly under tension.

Mr. Hanson also discussed the problem of the selection of suitable receiving locations, so that one or more short wave pick-up points will always be within range of the balloon's minute transmitter during the flight. The balloon may drift as far as three hundred miles or more. Pick-up points must be arranged within that radius in all directions, each connected by wire to the National Broadcasting Company's control room in Chicago.

In order to be prepared to deal with emergencies such as the descent of the balloon in desolate regions such as northern Michigan or Wisconsin, or even in one of the great lakes, the sponsors of the flight—A Century of Progress, the National Broadcasting Company and the Chicago Daily News—plan to follow the course of the balloon in a Goodyear dirigible also equipped with a radio for the higher frequencies, which can relay messages and supply assistance, if necessary.

Jean Piccard inspects newly-designed gondola, in which he or his twin brother, Auguste, will attempt to break record for a flight into stratosphere. Insert is Lieutenant-Commander T. G. W. Settle, pilot.

very enjoyable time was had by the women folks.

Everyday Religion

THE BIG BET

By Dr. Joseph Fort Newton
One of the fine spirits whom I knew during my first summer in England was Donald Hankey, whose wise, wonderful little books, "A Student In Arms," were so widely read. It was in July, 1915, that we met, before he was killed on the Somme in October, but it is impossible to forget him. There was something haunting about Hankey, a quality not easily defined, as of one who had learned a secret almost too simple to be found out, albeit open to all of us. In spite of all the years he seems to stand before me now, slender, graceful, with a gentle courtesy of address, in which seriousness and gaiety were blended in blitheness. To read his essays and sketches today is to hear his soft voice, and feel again the impress of a personality as we stood together in the evening after tea, hesitating to say goodbye. To the end of my days the memory of him will be a foot-fall, always light, of one untimely gone away.

At the end of his college days, instead of seeking fame and fortune, he went into the East London slums, living in a gaunt, gray, street, a brother of the poor. When the World War broke out Hankey entered the army, not as a "chaplain" but as a private in the ranks. It was out of this life that his essays were written, in one of which he summed up the faith by which he lived in the famous line: "Religion is just betting your life that there is a God."

To put it otherwise, life, faith, religion—or whatever word one may use—is a risk we must take, an adventure we must make; and all of us felt that Hankey had made the big bet and won it. In other words, the measure of our courage is the measure of our discovery. Unless we have the grit and grace to test the highest truth, we can never know whether it is true or not.

Of course it may be a delusion; we do not know until we try it out fearlessly. The coward in each of us hesitates, asking for advanced information that the battle will be a victory; but there is also a hero in us, too. Therefore to the word of Hankey let us add the saying of Nietzsche: "I charge thee not to throw away the hero in thy soul."

CHILDRED FEVER

That the United States suffers from a relatively high maternal death rate is now well known.

Through careful statistical studies it has been shown that about 30 per cent of the maternal deaths following childbirth are due to infection and further, that from 70 to 90 per cent of these deaths are due to infection with a type of germ known as the hemolytic streptococci.

These germs, of which there are numerous subdivisions, are also responsible for other types of infections, such, for example, as scarlet fever and erysipelas.

Puerperal infection, the infection of childbirth, does not therefore appear to be a distinctive disease. It is rather an infection which results from the condition that the birth area is injured during delivery, thus laying open a large field for invasion by germs of various kinds.

The outcome in this condition depends as in all infections, on the nature and the virulence of the germs, on the local conditions which favor or oppose the multiplication of the germs, and on the general resistance of the patient.

It is possible, as has been demonstrated in the case of scarlet fever and erysipelas, to produce antitoxins which will in a marked degree neutralize the poison produced by certain of the hemolytic germs.

Such antitoxins have been used and in one series of cases scarlet fever antitoxin was employed. In one group of patients suffering with acute infections due to hemolytic streptococci by the use of antitoxins the death rate was reduced 50 per cent.

Corroborative evidence of the value of this line of attack on puerperal fever has come from a study of patients, pregnant women, on the score of their susceptibility to the toxin of the scarlet fever germ. It has been observed that those who are resistant to scarlet fever toxin are less likely to develop serious infections after delivery.

Celebrate Century Of Methodism In Ottawa Last Eve

Ottawa, Ill., June 23.—(AP)—A Century of Methodism in Ottawa will be celebrated tonight at a centennial banquet in the armory, with Bishop and Mrs. Ernest Lynn Waldorf, Chicago, as guests of honor.

It was in 1833 that the Rev. Samuel Beggs, Sr., was appointed pastor for the Ottawa circuit by the Illinois Conference, which then embraced the entire state and part of Indiana. Methodist circuit riders were the first teachers of religion in the Illinois valley after the early Catholic missionaries, and the first Methodist church was the first church in Ottawa.

Twenty-three churches in the Joliet-Dixon district of the Rock river conference are cooperating in tonight's celebration.
